Aim High

Sora-san, you can't use only hiragana just to increase the character count.
わたしはこの「ごんぎつね」をよんでとても かなしい おはなしだとおもいました なぜかとい うと ごんはひとりぼっち あやまるきもとおもってくりやわ しをあげていたのにそのきもちにきづ いたときはごんはしんでしまってい たからです
I thought Gon, The Little Fox was a very sad story If I was to say why it was said, that would be because when Hyoju realized Gon had been the one giving him gifts, Gon had already died.

You can't use katakana either.
The tragic ending of "Gon, The Little Fox". After shooting Gon and seeing Hyoju standing still with an emotional look on his face, I couldn't find myself feeling remorse over it. Could this ending be telling us that all of it was retribution for Gon's malicious pranks...?

TLN: In her first text Sora only used hiragana (which is a syllabic alphabet) instead of using kanji (chinese characters) meaning she had a lot of characters despite not using a lot of words (I left the original on top so you could see for yourself). In her second text, she used katakana (another syllabic alphabet) to write long foreign words like "emotional" (エモーショナル) and "retribution" (リトリビューション), again to inflate the character count without using many words. I bolded the words that were in katakana.